

Depositors in Detroit Demur to RFC Payoff Plan for Closed Bank

WASHINGTON — Jesse Jones' latest formula for paying off depositors of closed banks has the financial czars guessing.

On the surface the RFC Chairman's plan looks like a bonafide Christmas tree. But knowing Jesse's proverbial tightness they are wondering if it isn't just a canny campaign maneuver.

Jesse Jones' plan has been laid before the depositors of the First National Bank of Detroit, largest closed bank in the world, also before the Union Trust Company of Cleveland. It provides that the RFC shall advance sufficient funds for an immediate 20 per cent "dividend" to all depositors.

But this cheering proposition has a catch in it—for the larger depositors.

While nominally all depositors would be entitled to the 20 per cent payoff, actually, under a deft reservation included by Jesse, the larger depositors would be paid only 10 per cent. The remaining 10 per cent would be used to pay off IN FULL the many thousands of depositors with accounts of $300 or less.

In other words, Jones, in effect, is saying:

"The Government will put up the $85,000,000 necessary for a 20 per cent payoff. But it will do so only if you large depositors agree in advance to allow 10 per cent of your share to be paid out in full to all the little fellows."

The large depositors of the two institutions are now being privately canvassed on the proposition.

But the inside whisper is that some of the big corporations, with large accounts tied in the Detroit bank, are balking. They contend that the frozen money belongs to their stockholders and that without their express approval they must oppose Jesse Jones' wizardry.

Section 7B

Of all the provisions of the NIRA none has caused more discussion, upheaval, and controversy, than Section 7a—the clause giving labor the legal right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining.

Yet there is another provision tucked away in the Recovery Act just about as potent.

Obscured from sight by the heat and turmoil over Section 7a, the public has completely overlooked its twin provision—Section 7b. This empowers the President to encourage the making of collective bargaining agreements between employers and unions, these agreements, when approved, to have the standing and authority of a code.

So far this law has been applied only twice:

1 In the Appalachian agreement of September, 1933, between the United Mine Workers and the formerly anti-union coal operators of the section.

2 In the agreement ratified a few weeks ago between the bricklayers' unions in New York City and the mason builders' and contractors' associations, fixing minimum wage and hour terms.

Unused Tomb

Tourists in Washington get a certain thrill from standing on the marble stair laid in the floor of the crypt which marks the median point of the Capitol Building. They never miss it. They stand there, "just to see how it feels."

But for an act of the Virginia Assembly a hundred years ago, however, there would be no star on which to stand. There would be an opening in the floor instead—an opening through which they would peer down into the basement at two identical sarcophagi, one containing the remains of the Father of our Country, the other the remains of his wife.

Congress has passed a resolution providing for the removal of George Washington's remains from Mount Vernon to Washington to be entombed within the Capitol Building of the country he founded. The consent of Mrs. Washington had

MISS COLDREN TAKEN AT 77; RITES FRIDAY

Death Comes Tuesday Evening At Home of Niece, Mrs. Earl Lutz.

Three months' illness of complications proved fatal at 9:15 p. m. Tuesday to Miss Vina A. Coldren, 77, at the home of her niece, Mrs. Earl W. Lutz, 353 E. Main-st.

Miss Coldren had been confined to bed since June 28. She was widely known throughout the county, having worked as a milliner and clerk in Friedman's store for a number of years before its closing, and also at Crist's department store.

PIERPONT TO DIE OCT. 17

Supreme Court Overrules Plea; Dead Makley's Appeal Also Denied.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 26.—The Ohio state supreme court, overruling his appeal, decreed today that Harry Pierpont, notorious Dillinger gangster, must die in the electric chair for the murder of a sheriff.

Date of his execution was fixed by the high tribunal as October 17. Appeal of Pierpont's companion, Charles Makley, also was dismissed by the state supreme court. Makley died last Saturday from bullet wounds sustained in the unsuccessful attempt he and Pierpont made to bluff their way out of "death row" at the state penitentiary.

Basis of the appeals was not the asserted innocence of Pierpont and Makley but the allegation that they had been denied a fair trial and that their constitutional rights had been violated by the presence of the military at their trials.

The appeals also were built around the allegation that their indictment by the Allen county grand jury had been improper, that instead of hearing witnesses before returning the true bills, the veniremen had heard only the request of the prosecutor that an indictment be returned.

METHODIST MEN HEAR DR. JONES Excellent Talk On Early Circleville Interest Members; Hosts to Presbyterion on Oct. 23

A splendid address on Circleville and its origin was made before a large number of members of the Methodist Episcopal church Men's club Tuesday evening by Dr. Howard Jones, one of Ohio's leading authorities on history.

Dr. Jones explained how Circleville came to be located where it is, and why it was named Circleville. His many stories of the interesting history surrounding the town greatly pleased his listeners.

To prove that a doctor's time is never his own, Dr. Jones was forced to leave the meeting before he had time to tell of his own reminiscences of the city which began just after the time of the Civil War. He promised to return again to tell that story.

The speaker was presented by Supt. E. L. Daley.

The remainder of the program included vocal solos by Elzie Radcliffe and John Hegele with Hunter Chambers at the piano.

A splendid supper was served by members of the Young Ladies' Guild.

An invitation was issued by President Glen Geib to the Presbyterian Men's club, of which J. O. Eagleson is president, to meet in the Methodist church Oct. 23.

SALEK'S PALS ASSIST STATE

Tell in Buffalo Trial That "Bruno Told Us He Shot Uhl Twice."

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Two members of Bruno Salek's "little Dillinger gang" turned state's witnesses today and helped wind tighter the chain of evidence against Salek and Stanel Pluzdrak, alleged slayers of Police Lieutenant George L. Uhl.

Stephen Micon, whose car Salek and Pluzdrak were driving when they were stopped for questioning by Lieutenant Uhl, and Edward Maday, who admitted participation in several holdups with Stanley and Bruno, testified against them.

They told of the holdup of the Broadway theatre earlier in the evening just before Uhl was shot, and their return to a rooming house where Salek, Pluzdrak, Maday, Micon and Alice Zimmerman, Salek's sweetheart, resided.

Maday testified Salek, after discovering that the tin box snatched from the theatre manager contained only tools, said he and Pluzdrak were going out "on another stickup."

They returned an hour later, Maday said, with the report that they had had a run-in with two cops and that Bruno said he had shot Lieutenant Uhl twice.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 26.—The state today was to start introduction of evidence through which it hoped to send Bruno Salek and Stanley Pluzdrak, members of Buffalo's "little Dillinger" gang to the electric chair for the slaying of Police Lieutenant George Uhl.

Death in the electric chair was demanded for the two youths by District Attorney Walter C. Newcomb as their first degree murder trial opened yesterday afternoon. Newcomb branded Salek and Pluzdrak as "accomplices in crime."

Throckmorton Sways Large Crowd; Other State Men Introduced.

In one of the most enthusiastic political meetings Circleville has seen for some time, Judge Dean C. Throckmorton, of Columbus, addressed a capacity audience in the common pleas court room, Tuesday evening, praising President Roosevelt's "human attitude" toward government and called for continued support of his policies by the election of an entire Democratic ticket in November.

More than 200 persons were crowded into the court room to hear the address, which was frequently interrupted by loud applause and shouting.

Although short in stature, Judge Throckmorton carried a powerful voice and clearly and definitely "presented his case," as he remarked, "both for the plaintiff and defense."

FAILED TO CURE ILLS

Attacking the Republican administration of President Harding, Coolidge and Hoover for their failure to amend or cure the economic ills of the nation, Judge Throckmorton painted the picture of conditions President Roosevelt faced when he assumed office.

"Having the 'common man' first in mind as he went about this task, President Roosevelt undertook a program to restore our government to the people for which it was founded and extricate it from the hands of the Wall Street racketeers who had been placed in charge by the three preceding Republican executives," Throckmorton declared.

The speaker remarked of the histories of the two major parties, pointing out that the Federalist party, nucleus of the present Republican party, founded by Alexander Hamilton, a banker, had a rich or privileged man's philosophy, while the Democratic party, founded by Thomas Jefferson, from the beginning "believed in equalities for all and privileges for none."

Throckmorton praised the record of Mel G. Underwood, of New Lexington, congressman from this district, and urged his re-election by a great majority. He also

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.

While Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, whose baby was kidnaped and murdered, was testifying under dramatic circumstance today before the Bronx-co grand jury which is hearing evidence against Bruno Richard Hauptmann, the suspect, announcement was made by the authorities that $850 more ransom money had been found by detectives searching Hauptmann's garage.

A .25 caliber revolver also was found hidden behind a wall in the garage.

Previously $13,750 of the $50,000 which Dr. John F. ("Jafie") Condon, the Lindbergh intermediary, had turned over to a strange man in St. Raymond's cemetery, the Bronx, had been found in a can in the Hauptmann garage.

IN ROOM HALF HOUR

Lindbergh entered the grand jury room at 10:10 a. m. and testified for twenty five minutes. He then quickly left the building. He did not see Hauptmann, so far as known, although the kidnap suspect was sitting, shackled to a chair in the district attorney's office, two floors below the eighth-floor grand jury room in which the famous flyer gave his testimony.

Announcement that more of the ransom money had been recovered was made by District Attorney Samuel J. Foley just as Lindbergh—at 11:40 a. m.—left the courtroom in an automobile, presumably for the home of his relatives in Englewood, N. J. There was a rumor that he would go to the Hauptmann home to inspect the scene where the ransom money was found but this could not be verified.

PALE BUT COMPOSED

Hauptmann, surrounded by three detectives, sat grim and tight-lipped in the district attorney's office as Lindbergh was in the building. The prisoner was pale and a bit drawn but his composure was as cool as ever. There was not even a window in the little room in which he was sequestered while Lindbergh was testifying.

Lindbergh was reported to have identified his baby's sleeping garments and the safety pin attached to it when he was before the jury. It was said that he also identified part of the ransom money.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.

Outstanding developments in the Lindbergh kidnaping and murder mystery probe today were as follows:

(1)—Climaxing a 3,000-mile cross-continent airplane dash, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh appeared at noon before the Bronx-co grand jury, which has been asked to return an extortion indictment against Bruno Richard Hauptmann, sullen, alien carpenter.

A large attendance was present at this session presided over by the worthy matron, Mrs. Leslie May.

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

THEY tell me that country newspapers often get poetry sent to them to print. Some of the people that send in poetry don't always write it themselves. They just copy a piece they like real well, and send that in. Of course they sign their own name to it, because they don't know how much trouble that might get them into, and besides, they think it's worth the risk, just to get into print under such good poetry.

Well, the country editors are on the lookout for that kind of stuff, and some of them are pretty well up on the big writers anyhow. One day a guy came in and introduced himself to the editor and handed him a poem with his name signed to it.

"This is mighty good verse," the editor says.

"Thanks. I kinda thought you'd like it."

"Did you write it?"

"Every word of it, all by myself."

"Shake hands again," says the editor. "I never knowed I'd have the good luck to shake hands with old Willie Wadsworth Longfellow himself, right here in my office in nineteen-twenty-eight!"

Proctor Baughman, director of the parade division, indicated that with the addition of the school parade this year, the Pumpkin Show throngs will see the greatest street presentations that have ever been shown. All of his chairman, he said, are working diligently to boost the number of entries in their divisions.

That outside interest in the show is not at a low ebb was indicated by Harry J. Briggs, director of the horse show, who said that on a recent visit to Texas he was queried about Circleville's Pumpkin Show. Reed Shafer, president of the Chamber of Commerce, who presided at the meeting, told of a trip to Muncie, Ind., over the week-end during which a car whizzed around his machine in the middle-western state and the occupant seeing his Pumpkin Show sign, shouted, "I'll be there."

TO GREET WALLACE Preparations are going forward, it was indicated, to make the opening night, Wednesday, Oct. 3, a grand one. The visit and address of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace to this city is expected to draw 20,000 persons from central Ohio here.

Everything points to the biggest and best show ever—and it opens just a week from today, folks!

Fireproof Ships

SOME good seems likely to grow out of the Morro Castle disaster.

Had the vessel in which scores perished off the New Jersey coast been of fireproof construction, the tragic happening that shocked the nation and the world would not have occurred.

Already there is being heard a demand that the use of wood be abandoned in the construction of passenger vessels and that steel be employed in order to eliminate the fire hazard. President Roosevelt is reported as saying that he will recommend to the next session of congress legislation to provide for this.

It ought not to be necessary to pass a law to bring about this result. Ship companies ought to feel it incumbent upon them voluntarily to operate only fireproof vessels.

Fire has become probably the greatest hazard now faced in ocean travel. Improvements in the construction of ships and development of the radio have eliminated most of the old terrors of the sea. But that of fire remains.

Why shipbuilders have not overcome this hazard by building fireproof vessels is not entirely clear. The chief reason probably was the increased cost. But this becomes relatively an insignificant item in comparison with the menace to life that exists in a wooden vessel with hundreds of persons aboard.

Such disastrous fires as that on the Morro Castle do not occur often. Every first class vessel today carries efficient fire-fighting equipment, but this is no guarantee against disaster although it may reduce the chances of such.

The one sure way to eliminate the fire hazard is to build only fireproof vessels. The Morro Castle disaster serves to bring about this reform, those who perished aboard it will not have died in vain.

Munitions-making and war-making seem to bear a close relationship.

Militarism Gone Mad

THE drastic course in military training prescribed for Italians by the council of ministers must prove discouraging to the advocates of world peace. It can leave no doubt in the minds of observers of European affairs that Europe, and consequently the world, is little further removed from the danger of war today than in the years preceding the outbreak of the World war.

Italy's action in compelling all males from 8 to 33 years of age to undergo military training stand as a challenge to other nations in that part of the world. Countries contiguous to Italy or having interests that may come into conflict with those of the latter will feel it a necessity to take steps to match the new policy to make Italy a nation of highly trained soldiers.

Never before has any nation gone as far in preparing for war. It would be difficult to imagine a more thoroughly militaristic policy or one liable to have such far-reaching and disastrous effects.

The move is another blow and a severe one to the cause of disarmament. It is an invitation to war that almost is sure to have a response some day.

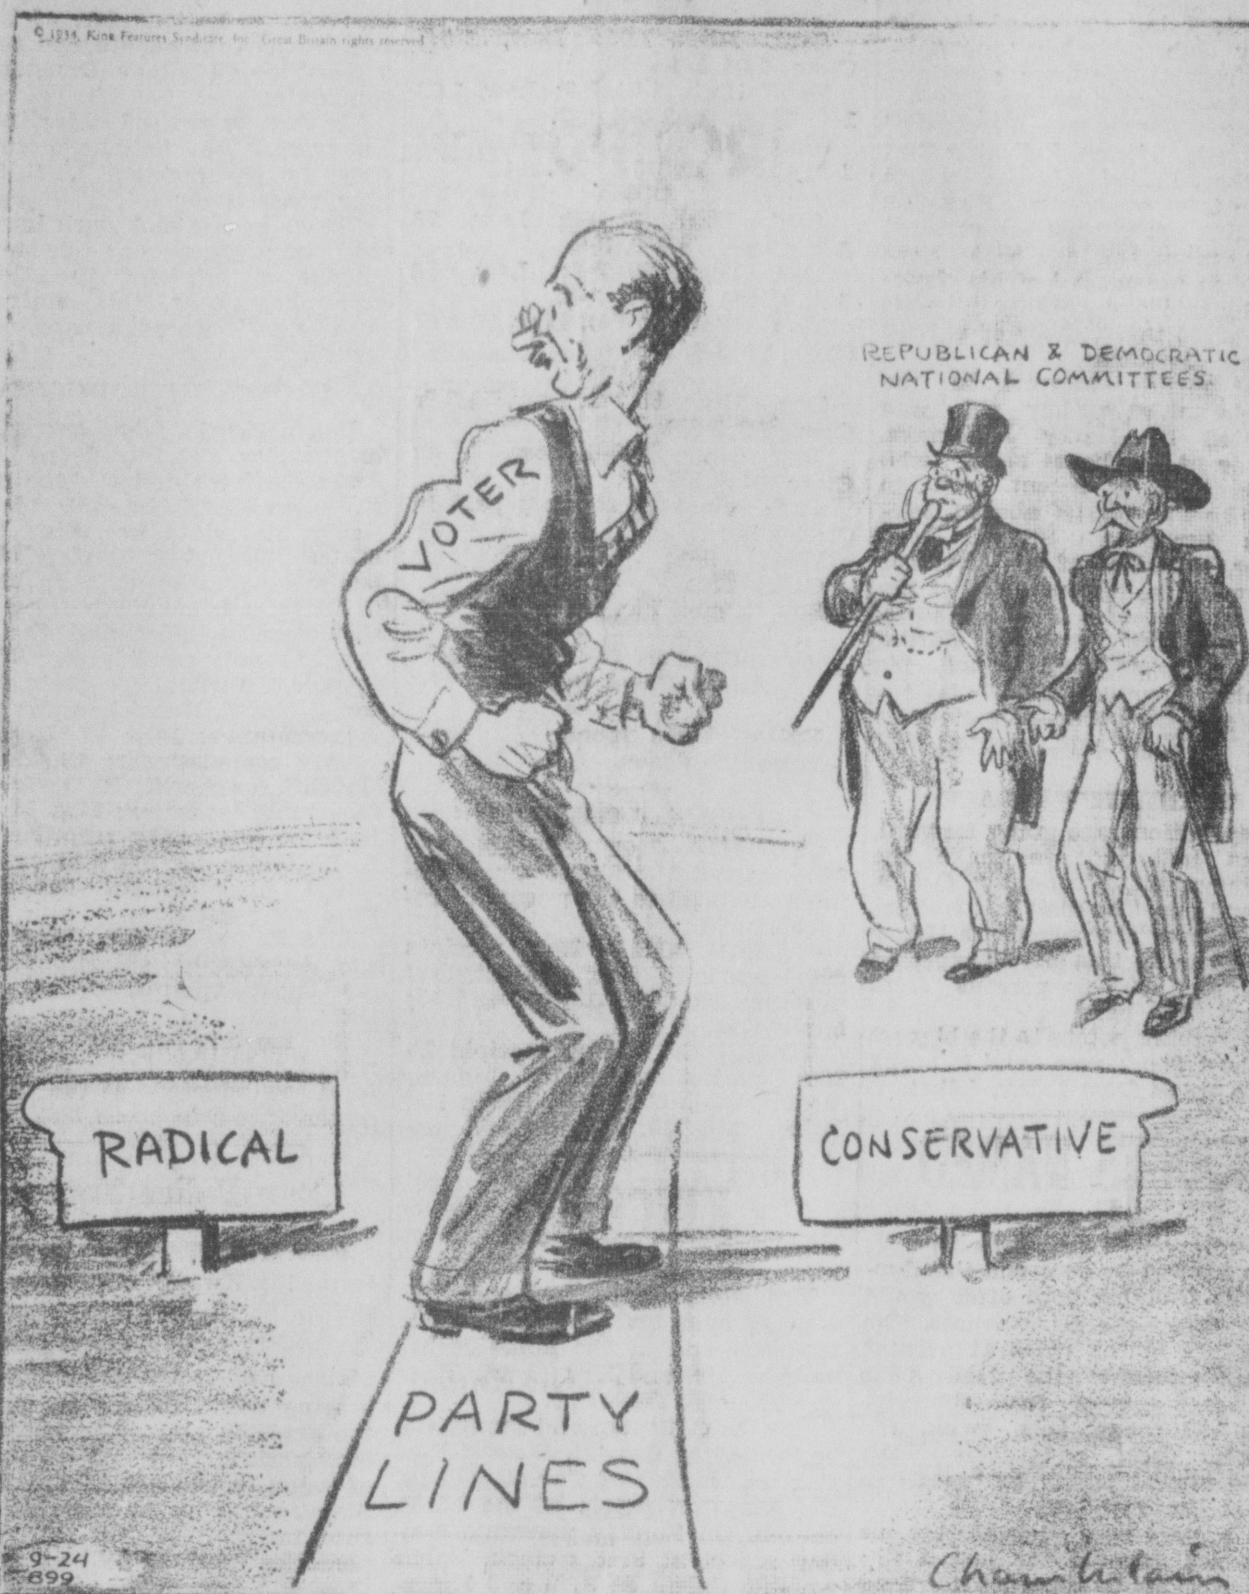

Responsibility for the consequences must rest upon Mussolini. The Italian dictator may think that he is acting for the best interests of Italy, but the dangers not only to his country but to others also, are so many and so self-evident that Italians as well as the peoples of other nations will regard the move with grave concern.

Married persons live longer than single ones, says a statistician. But he didn't say if they were happier.

It's Getting Harder and Harder to Tell Which Way He'll Jump

"DEATH SONG"

by JOAN CLAYTON AND MALCOLM LOGAN

SYNOPSIS

In August, Seifert Vail was murdered at exclusive Sherwood Forest Sanatorium. Up to that time, Mark Hillyer, the playwright, crippled from arthritis, had been bored. The crime gave him new interest in life. It was he who finally solved the mystery. He saw the significance of the phonograph record singing in Vail's own voice in the room where its creator lay dead.

CHAPTER II

For two days Mark was feverishly busy. The doctors took his case history, X-rayed him, bled his legs and took specimens of his blood. When they were not examining him, he lay in bed, propped up with pillows, and issued orders by the dozen. He fought several skirmishes with the sanatorium staff and, victorious, saw his bare, antiseptic quarters blossom into an imitation of a green room. When he had finished, a crimson carpet covered the floor; a brass spittoon gleamed in one corner; a cocktail shaker adorned the bedside table. Mark's big leather chair stood beside the scarlet oak desk on which he had written his first starring play, "The King of High Jinx." The walls were crowded with autographed pictures of the stars of two decades. The place of honor on the bureau was occupied by a portrait of a man, a young man who wore a natty derby, rented dress clothes, a malacca walking stick and a famous grin. That was Mark at twenty-two, taken in the season when High Jinx captured New York.

"It's just like home," I told Mark. "Home!" said Mark. "Get out of here before I start bawling!" We worked on Mark's new play for three months, and Mark put on a magnificent display of temperament. He had always acted his plays as he wrote them, and he found it intolerable to dictate, lying quietly in bed. He was a dandy, to two hours of work a day, and when he was not working, he was so profoundly, bitterly bored that I feared he would never recover. I expressed that fear to Dr. John Calvert, who had taken a particular interest in Mark. "Boredom isn't fatal," he said, in his dry way, "if it were, half my patients would be dead. Tell him the mountains are worth looking at."

"You can take your mountains, and you know what you can do with them," Mark said when I repeated this advice. "My mountains are skyscrapers and my trees are street lights. Times Square is the only scenery I want to see."

Dr. Calvert had sounded unsympathetic, but for some time after that conversation, he took what time he could spare from his patients in the cottages to visit Mark. That was characteristic of him. He would go to any trouble for a patient, though his manner with them was often unfortunately curt. John Calvert was not more than twenty-eight, but he was usually as sedate as a man twice that age. He seemed to me very guarded, as though he were afraid to let himself go. It was curious to see how well he got along with Mark, who shamelessly revealed every slightest emotion. Sometimes Mark carried him away, and for a little while the doctor would be gay; then he would realize that he was letting down his defenses, and he would withdraw into himself again.

In April Mark finished his play. It opened in New York on the fifteenth of May, at the end of a disastrous theatrical season. "Gas Light Willie," produced on a shoestring—Mark's own shoestring, by the way—was an instant success. Mark didn't know whether to be exultant or furious. He hated Ellis Cochran's success in the role he had planned for himself. He loved his own pictures in the newspapers. They were new photographs. Mark had posed in bed for them. He wore a dress shirt, a dinner jacket and a cigarette holder that drooped from his lips at a rakish angle. The camera showed one half of a gentleman who might have been stepping from sidewalk to limousine. Mark was abnormally sensitive about his infirmity.

Even in the beginning, the murder of Seifert Vail fell into a pattern that now seems almost inevitable. If Mark had not written "Gas Light Willie," he could never have solved the crime; it would not even have occurred to him to try. "Gas Light Willie" made Mark a sanatorium celebrity. Other patients, driven by boredom in search of novelty, maneuvered for introductions to the patient whom Broadway had not forgotten. Mark was a new experience to them, though they were not to him. The jaded men and women who came casually to Mark's room in the hospital were rich, ill, and self-centered. They were gossip. This was their common meeting ground with Mark.

He listened while they talked of the other patients—their annoying habits, their love affairs, their illnesses and their idiosyncracies. So it was that his callers put into his hands the clues which were to lead him to the solution of a murder not then committed. These informal tea parties, at which he frequently served cocktails made from prescription liquor, gave Mark an understanding of the restlessness, the feverishness, the petty emotions magnified to monstrous hates and fears and incredible loves, which fill the lives of those who live in an idleness that only death can end. It is not remarkable that later he was to insist upon the importance of the trivial.

Sue Faraday, Mark's nurse, acted as his hostess. She was a small, lovely girl with warm brown hair and eyes, and in her starched white uniform she looked like an ingenue from one of Mark's plays. She loved Mark, I believe, yet in those days that followed Seifert Vail's murder she was to fail him. Like all of us, she had her own anxieties, her own secret. In the beginning, untouched by tragedy, fluttered by the excitement of nursing a man both playwright and actor, she was charming.

"Mr. Ruxton wants to meet you, then," he said, and she said, "He's a breathless whisper. He's our richest patient, you know." James Ruxton, a tall, gray man dying tediously of cirrhosis of the liver, called several times. Usually he came with his handsome, pleasant young nephew, Loren Ruxton. The tired, ill man who had built up a great investment banking house obviously had nothing in common with a man who had spent his whole life in the theatre; but he loved his nephew with all the passion of an aging, lonely man, and no interest of Loren's was too slight to engage his attention.

Twice Mark was visited by Willis Clendening and Milton Cross, who lived with Seifert Vail and James Ruxton in Lakeside Cottage. They were a strange pair. Clendening, an owl-eyed, long-nosed, inquisitive young man, boasted of his health and prowess, hungered for excitement as for a drug and suffered from acute dilatation of the heart which might kill him at any moment. Cross, a splendidly healthy hypochondriac, lived in constant fear of exertion and disturbance. Mark called him the man who died daily. Cross and Clendening quarreled casually, but they seemed to find their interminable and vicious bickering a necessity of life.

Seifert Vail came to Mark's room only once. A tall, beautifully proportioned man with a singer's deep chest, he came to tell Mark in a voice rasping and husky from an aneurism of the throat that "Gas Light Willie," which he had neither seen nor read, was trash. Mark blandly agreed. Vail amplified his criticism.

"No drama without music can be anything but shallow," he said. "I understand," said Mark, "that you were a singer."

"I had the most magnificent voice in the world," he said. "The best critics said I would be greater than Caruso." Mark said, "I heard you in Tristan, Mr. Vail."

"Tristan!" the singer exclaimed. His mouth began to work. "How Francine loved me as Tristan!" Suddenly he began to cry, and as he cried he cursed in a harsh, fierce mumble. For a moment I stared at him. I had heard the story of the death of his wife and abrupt end of Vail's career a few months later. Before I could move, Vail turned abruptly and without another word left.

"I detest crying drunks," Mark said when he had gone. "I wonder where he got it," I said.

"I wonder how he paid for it," said Mark. "In fact, I wonder how he rates Sherwood Forest at all. I've never heard of charity cases here, and opera singers who've been 'exed' out for years are notoriously not millionaires."

I said a shade ironically, "Why not ask Dr. Calvert? Isn't Vail an old acquaintance of his?" "I've already asked," replied Mark, the incorrigible gleamer of facts which did not concern him. "He's as much in the dark as I am."

This incident occurred two months before the murder. I have repeated the brief conversation as accurately as I can remember it because, later, Mark's only meeting with Seifert Vail was to prove so important. He never returned to Mark's room, and I hardly saw him again until the fifth of August! On that sultry Wednesday night James Ruxton, at the suggestion of his nephew, gave a dance for all the patients well enough to attend, and at this dance Seifert Vail made his last public appearance.

Gastritis Is A Common Ailment

Soon Becomes Chronic If Faulty Eating Habits Continue

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

AT SOME time or other it is probable everyone has suffered from gastritis. As its name implies, this is an inflammation of the walls of the stomach. It leads to marked pain and discomfort.

By the time it is recognized the gastritis has usually become chronic. Often it can be traced to faulty eating habits, with persistent irritation of the lining of the stomach. The acute form may be caused by a wallowing in coarse and uncooked foods, or the excessive use of intoxicating beverages. It may also be produced by the absorption of some toxin or poison. This occurs in such diseases as influenza, pneumonia, measles and scarlet fever.

Faulty habits of eating carried over a period of many years, are the most common cause of gastritis. Persons who indulge in the excessive use of condiments, fried and greasy foods, or who eat irregularly, and do not chew their food properly, are frequently subject to this annoying condition.

Gastritis may be traced to a focus of infection somewhere in the body. For instance the tonsils, teeth, throat, nasal sinuses, gall bladder or appendix may be diseased. The poisons from these infected areas are carried in the blood stream to the stomach where they set up an inflammation.

The victim of gastritis often complains of heartburn, indigestion, hyperacidity or other gastric disturbance. Nausea, vomiting and diarrhea, are frequent complications. As a result of loss of appetite and impaired digestion, the general nutrition and health of the body are greatly determined. This lowers the resistance against infectious disease.

Gastritis should not be confused with gastric ulcer or other diseases of the stomach. The diagnosis can be made only by the physician who examines you. At times it is necessary to resort to the X-ray for accurate determination of the underlying cause.

Value of Strict Diet
Victims of gastritis should pay strict attention to the diet. They should avoid all foods rich in fat. Fried or greasy foods and those containing an excessive amount of salt, pepper, spices and other condiments are not permitted. Foods that are difficult to digest should be avoided. The diet should be simple yet nutritious.

Never neglect heartburn, indigestion or other digestive disturbances. These complaints are not diseases, but they are signs of some disorder within the digestive tract. They may be an indication of ulcer or some more serious disease process. If recognized and cared for in its early stages, such troubles can be entirely cured. Neglect is dangerous.

PATTERN 9163

The shirtmaker idea is just as smart in pajamas as in a frock—nothing more need be said. Don't you think this trim outfit would be just grand for lounging about of a cold winter's evening? The casual blouse may be made either with long or short sleeves—and if you choose the long, you'll just adore the fullness at the wrists. The darts at the waist of the trousers front and back, give plenty of room for comfort and at the same time keep them from being bulky. It's a swagger design in printed cottons, but it would be just as charming in a bright jersey especially if it were made with a contrasting vest and collar.

Pattern 9163 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 4 1/2 yards 36 inch fabric. Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

THE FALL AND WINTER ISSUE of the MARIAN MARTIN PATTERN BOOK is now off the press. It is big fashion news... and delightful reading... filled with stunning and easy-to-make patterns for street and house dresses, blouses, skirts, lingerie, sports clothes... all the essentials of a smart outfit for matron, maiden or little child. PRICE OF BOOK FIFTEEN CENTS. BOOK AND PATTERN TOGETHER TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. Send your order to The Herald Pattern Department 124 W. Main.

His Tip Led to Arrest of Lindbergh Suspect

Walter Lyle, inset, attendant at a gasoline service station in New York City, above, has been credited with giving the tip that led to the arrest of Bruno Richard Hauptmann as a suspect in the Lindbergh baby kidnapping and murder. Receiving a forbidden $10 gold certificate from a motorist, Lyle was careful to jot down the license number of the auto. Investigation disclosed that the certificate had been one of the Lindbergh ransom notes, and Hauptmann was traced through the license.

MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Late in the 1870's the populous sections of Australia were terrorized by a notorious, dashing Robin Hood bandit, called "Stingaree."

Among his depredations was the kidnapping of the Governor General of All Australia. Later he shocked the British Empire by attending a theater in Melbourne, wearing the Governor's full regalia. He managed to escape.

With him he took Hilda Bouverie, celebrated beauty and operatic star of the period. A few days later the woman reappeared, with a story of having been taken to "Stingaree's" mountain lair. She seemed peculiarly unaffected by her experience and refused to press prosecution.

"Stingaree" was never heard of again in Australia. But for years the various capitals of the world wondered about the tall, stern, handsome man who followed the opera star about, and for whom she seemed to have the utmost devotion.

The remarkable romance between the opera star and the bandit is told in RKO-Radio Pictures' current romantic melodrama, "Stingaree," co-starring Irene Dunne and Richard Dix, with Mary Boland in a featured role, opens tonight at the Cliftona.

AT THE GRAND

"Merry Wives of Reno," the Warner Bros. picture which gives a humorous slant on the doings in the world's famous divorce colony, is the feature attraction at the Grand Theatre today.

Margaret Lindsay, Glenda Farrell and Ruth Donnelly are the three merry wives who romp to Reno, Miss Lindsay and Miss Donnelly to seek divorces and Miss Farrell to find a new world of men to flirt with.

Laughing Around the World
With IRVIN S. COBB

What the Defendant Craved

By IRVIN S. COBB

A DARKY was up for pleading down south for a serious crime. Having been indicted, he was arraigned before the court and the case against him was called. It then developed that he had no counsel.

"Why have you engaged no attorney to defend you?" inquired the judge on the bench.

"Jedge," said the defendant, "I ain't got no money to be wastin' on lawyers. De tell me lawyers is kind of costive."

"Well," inquired His Honor, "what do you propose to do then about the trial of your case? The prosecuting attorney tells me he's ready to go ahead and impanel a jury and present the evidence."

"Jedge," answered the negro, "so far ez I is concerned, you can jest let the matter drop right here."

But the court explained that this would hardly do. He glanced about the room and his eye fell upon two striplings, newly admitted to the practice and the youngest and least experienced members of the bar. "I shall appoint Mr. Jones and Mr. Smith," he said, indicating the juveniles, "to represent you."

The prisoner eyed his attorneys doubtfully.

"Jedge," he said, "I'd lak to mek you a proposition, please, suh."

"State the proposition."

"I'd lak to trade you off one of dese yere lawyers fur a good witness."

HUGH JOHNSON, RESIGNING, OFFERS TO SERVE WHEN NEEDED

Roosevelt, Aide, Part as Friends

ABOARD PRESIDENTIAL SPECIAL, Sept. 26.—Hugh Johnson has resigned.

The most meteoric career of the New Deal, approaching if at all possible the color and fire of the man who now heads the government, Franklin D. Roosevelt, is ended so far as the present administration is concerned.

Johnson in resigning, advised the president that when called on again, he would be glad to serve. The president in accepting the resignation advised "Hugh" as he addressed him in the letter, that he might call on him again.

IN BRILLIANT REIGN

But never again, will the nation see Johnson in the brilliant setting he has centered for the past fifteen months. Never again will he be the czarlike figure who in effect ruled the business and industry of a land of 140,000,000 people. Never again will his rugged, lined face be seen in the newsreels as the man whose word for a time was the inescapable law.

In other words, in effect, the king is dead, and for the present there is no new figure for whom it can be said as in a monorhony, "Long Live the King." The NRA will go on. New leaders will come. But there will be more than one. The big recovery unit will split into three divisions. The ruling body will be a board, so to speak. No board could approach General Johnson in color, fire and executive nerve and snap.

Johnson's separation from the New Deal, in which he has been such a towering figure for the past fifteen months, cannot but be a real wrench for President Roosevelt. It was with this that the president planned the most vital drive of his administration, the drive which he built as a march

As Senator Long Smiled After Vote Triumph

Senator Huey Long, center, posed long enough to register jubilation when the cameraman encountered him in his New Orleans hotel, where the Kingfish and his followers had been celebrating the decisive defeat of the New Orleans city machine led by Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, at the primary polls. Encircled by Senator Long's right arm is James twenty four hours a day. Time and again Mr. Roosevelt has urged the recovery administration to take a rest. Seldom has the NRA chieftain complied with these requests.

The Johnson resignation sent back to private life a man who has a brilliant military record, and who in business has been more than a little successful. Johnson was a regular army officer formerly, and was in the Philippines during the trouble down there.

During the World War, Johnson became a member of the war industries board, which Bernard M. ("Barney") Baruch headed. In his capacity on this board he had much to do with buying the almost incredible amount of supplies that went to help American doughboys in France. There, too, he formed a friendly association with Baruch which has continued and grown since. When Mr. Roosevelt was looking for a man to head his great recovery project, the NRA, and asked his friend and financial adviser, Baruch, the latter suggested Johnson.

Now Johnson is back in private life. Whether he will again emerge in any official capacity, is in the opinion of officials high in the confidence of Mr. Roosevelt, doubtful.

Depositors in Detroit Demur to RFC Payoff Plan for Closed Bank

WASHINGTON — Jesse Jones' latest formula for paying off depositors of closed banks has the financial czars grousing.

On the surface the RFC Chairman's plan looks like a bonafide Christmas tree. But knowing Jesse's proverbial tightness they are wondering if it isn't just a canny campaign maneuver.

Jesse Jones' plan has been laid before the depositors of the First National Bank of Detroit, largest closed bank in the world, also before the Union Trust Company of Cleveland. It provides that the RFC shall advance sufficient funds for an immediate 20 per cent "dividend" to all depositors.

But this cheering proposition has a catch in it—for the larger depositors.

While nominally all depositors would be entitled to the 20 per cent payoff, actually, under a deft reservation included by Jesse, the larger depositors would be paid only 10 per cent. The remaining 10 per cent would be allowed to pay off in full the many thousands of depositors with accounts of $300 or less.

In other words, Jones, in effect, is saying:

"The Government will put up the $85,000,000 necessary for a 20 per cent payoff. But it will do so only if you large depositors agree in advance to allow 10 per cent of your share to be paid out in full to all the little fellows."

The large depositors of the two institutions are now being privately canvassed on the proposition.

But the inside whisper is that some of the big corporations, with large accounts tied in the Detroit bank, are balking. They contend that the frozen money belongs to their stockholders and that without their express approval they must oppose Jesse Jones' wizardry.

Section 7B

Of all the provisions of the NIRA none has caused more discussion, upheaval, and controversy, than Section 7a—the clause giving labor the legal right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining.

Yet there is another provision tucked away in the Recovery Act just about as potent.

Obscured from sight by the heat and turmoil over Section 7a, the public has completely overlooked its twin provision—Section 7b. This empowers the President to encourage the making of collective bargaining agreements between employers and unions, these agreements, when approved, to have the standing and authority of a code of law. This law has been applied only twice.

In the Appalachian agreement of September, 1933, between the United Mine Workers and the formerly anti-union coal operators of the section.

2. In the agreement ratified a few weeks ago between the bricklayers' unions in New York City and the mason-builders and contractors' associations, fixing minimum wage and hour terms.

Unused Tomb

Tourists in Washington get a certain thrill from standing on the marble slab laid in the floor of the crypt which marks the median point of the Capitol Building. They never miss it. They stand there, "just to see how it feels."

But for an act of the Virginia Assembly a hundred years ago, however, there would be no star on which to stand. There would be an opening in the floor instead—an opening through which they would peer down into the basement, at two identical sarcophagi, one containing the remains of the Father of their Country, the other the remains of his wife.

Congress had passed a resolution providing for the removal of George Washington's remains from Mount Vernon to Washington to be entombed within the Capitol Building, at the country he founded. The consent of Mrs. Washington had

Supreme Court Overrules Plea; Dead Makley's Appeal Also Denied.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 26.—The Ohio state supreme court, overruling his appeal, decreed today that Harry Pierpont, notorious Dillinger gangster, must die in the electric chair for the murder of a sheriff.

Appeal of Pierpont's companion, Charles Makley, also was dismissed by the state supreme court. Makley died last Saturday from bullet wounds sustained in the unsuccessful attempt he and Pierpont made to bluff their way out of "death row" at the state penitentiary.

Basis of the appeals was not the asserted innocence of Pierpont and Makley but the allegation that they had been denied a fair trial and that their constitutional rights had been violated by the presence of the military at their trials.

The appeals also were built around the allegation that their indictment by the Allen county grand jury had been improper, that instead of hearing witnesses before returning the true bills, the veniremen had heard only the request of the prosecutor that an indictment be returned.

PLAN MASS MEETING

George G. Adkins Begins Preparations

George G. Adkins, chairman of the Pickaway-co Democratic executive committee, announced Wednesday that Former Governor A. Vic Donahey, candidate for the U. S. Senate, and Senator C. C. Dill, of Spokane, Washington, will address a mammoth Democratic rally to be held in Memorial Hall on Tuesday, Oct. 9.

Mr. Adkins received word from state Democratic headquarters at noon Wednesday that Donahey and Dill, one of the leading members of the upper house, would be available on that date. He wanted to send them to Pickaway-co. Although Mr. Adkins had already called a meeting of executive, central committees, women's organization and Democratic men's club for Oct. 10, he told the state office to "send them on, we'll arrange a meeting." These organizations will help boost the Oct. 9 gathering.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Despite President Roosevelt's request that national office-holders step out of active political posts, the Democratic state committee, just before opening their state convention today selected Postmaster-General James A. Farley, for another term as chairman.

SEEK MEMORIAL HALL

He started immediately to make arrangements. His first step will be to close negotiations for Memorial Hall where a huge crowd can be accommodated.

Other arrangements are to be made in an effort to make the rally the biggest of the pre-election period.

Mr. Donahey's popularity in Pickaway-co and the 11th district is proved by the immense vote he received for the nomination. Democrats from everywhere will probably be here to hear him in one of his few addresses.

Mr. Adkins has been informed that Senator Dill is a fluent speaker with an important message.

HEAR DR. JONES

Excellent Talk On Early Circleville Interest Members; Hosts to Presbyterians on Oct. 23

A splendid address on Circleville and its origin was made before a large number of members of the Methodist Episcopal church Men's club Tuesday evening by Dr. Howard Jones, one of Ohio's leading authorities on history.

Dr. Jones explained how Circleville came to be located where it is, and why it was named Circleville. His many stories of the interesting history surrounding the town greatly pleased his listeners. To prove that a doctor's time is never his own, Dr. Jones was "forced" to leave the meeting before he had time to tell of his own reminiscences of the city which began just after the time of the Civil War. He promised to return again to tell that story.

The speaker was presented by Supt. E. L. Daley.

The remainder of the program included vocal solos by Elzie Radcliffe and John Hegala with Hunter Chambers at the piano.

A splendid supper was served by members of the Young Ladies' Guild.

An invitation was issued by President Glen Galt to the Presbyterian Men's club, of which J. O. Eagleson is president, to meet in the Methodist church Oct. 23.

SALEK'S PALS ASSIST STATE

Tell in Buffalo Trial That "Bruno Told Us He Shot Uhl Twice."

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Two members of Bruno Salek's "little Dillinger gang" turned state's witnesses today and helped wind tighter the chain of evidence against Salek and Stanel Pluzdrak, alleged slayers of Police Lieutenant George L. Uhl.

Stephen Micon, whose car Salek and Pluzdrak were driving when they were stopped for questioning by Lieutenant Uhl, and Edward Maday, who admitted participation in several holdups with Stanley and Bruno, testified against them.

They told of the holdup of the Broadway theatre earlier in the evening just before Uhl was shot, and their return to a rooming house where Salek, Pluzdrak, Maday, Micon and Alice Zimmerman, Salek's sweetheart, resided.

Maday testified Salek, after discovering that the tin box snatched from the theatre manager contained only tools, said he and Pluzdrak were going out "on another stickup."

They returned an hour later, Maday said, with the report that they had had a run-in with two cops and that Bruno said he had shot Lieutenant Uhl twice.

They told of the holdup of the Lexington congressman from this district, and urged his re-election by a great majority. He also

BULLETIN

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—An indictment charging extortion was returned by the Bronx-co grand jury this afternoon against Bruno Richard Hauptmann, the Lindbergh suspect, which development came not long after Col. Charles Lindbergh, father of the kidnaped baby, testified for 25 minutes before a body of 23 men.

It took the grand jury less than a minute and a half to indict Hauptmann.

Auto Burns, 5 Hardin-co Women Die

Tragedy Hits Kenton As Socially Prominent Women Burn To Death.

ADA, Sept. 26.—A light sedan, plunging from the road after it had side-swiped a large truck, today had carried five women to flaming deaths.

The women, all socially prominent in Hardin-co, died screaming in the burning wreckage of their car while witnesses were forced to stand helplessly by, unable to get near the automobile because of the searing fire.

Those who were killed were identified as:

Mrs. Hamilton E. Hoge, 56, wife of the Hardin-co common pleas judge.

Mrs. Walter T. Johnson, 55, wife of the president of a candy manufacturing company at Kenton.

Mrs. Dora Heistand, 62, widow of a Kenton physician.

Mrs. Cecelia McConnell, 65, widow of a Kenton contractor.

Mrs. Julia Ott, 65, of Berkeley, Cal.

PALE BUT COMPOSED

Hauptmann, surrounded by three detectives, sat grim and tight-lipped in the district attorney's office as Lindbergh was in the building. The prisoner was pale and a bit drawn but his composure was as cool as ever. There was not even a window in the little room in which he was sequestered while Lindbergh was testifying.

Lindbergh was reported to have identified his baby's sleeping garments and the safety pin attached to it when he was before the jury. It was said that he also identified part of the ransom money.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Outstanding developments in the Lindbergh kidnaping and murder mystery probe today were as follows:

(1)—Climaxing a 3,000-mile cross-continent airplane dash, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh appeared at noon before the Bronx-co grand jury, which has been asked to return an extortion indictment against Bruno Richard Hauptmann, sullen, alien carpenter.

(2)—District Attorney Samuel J. Quinn Tamm, who is in charge of the case, announced that he had identified part of the ransom money.

KRINN IN COLUMBUS

T. D. Krinn, deputy county auditor, attended a meeting of county old age pension supervisors at the Desier-Wallick hotel, in Columbus Tuesday evening.

Pickaway-co. Mr. Krinn is one of the few counties in the state which is promptly taking care of its quota. Mr. Krinn is the supervisor of the pension division in this county.

RIGGS' CLOUT TIES SERIES AT 3-ALL

COLUMBUS, Sept. 26.—Lew Riggs, the most blessed and belated ball player on the entire Columbus roster, was a hero today after his home run in the "clutch" last night to even the Columbus-Minneapolis series at three-all. The score was 7-6.

His Red Birds trailing in the series 2 to 3 and with the score 6 to 2 against them went to bat in the ninth inning with one chance in a thousand to win. Jess Petty was on the mound and he had been tough. But that's what the Birds liked last night, a tough pitcher. Charlie Wilson started the fire works with a single. Hal Anderson, playing for the slumping Gene Moore, tried hard but flied to Arlett. Blades took himself plateward for Mr. O'Dea and coaxed an Annie Oakley off the tiring Petty. The silver fox tossed a wide one to Teachout, relief pitching, and Jim Chaplin was called from the bullpen.

ANGLEY, MYERS DELIVER

Chaplin was supposed to stop Teachout because he was a right handed hitter but Blades called Mr. Tom Angley, the goon, from the dug out and Messer. Tom immediately singled Wilson home and chased his manager to the look-in corner. Neither runner remained there long, however, since Giant bound Bill Myers undered a triple to the scoreboard. A much as he dislikes to do so Angley had to run from first to the home plate behind Blades.

That left Myers on third with one out. Surely Lew Riggs could hit a long fly. Manager Donie Bush seeing the left handed hitter stride to the plate and countered by using Joe Shaute, late of Beranton, who has been in about every game the two teams have played. Mr. Shaute-pronounced Sha-out-is a southpaw and Riggs should have been meat. But he wasn't; he did meet the ball and it did sail out of the park and the ball game was over. Boy, oh boy, did he jam break loose!

TEACHOUT WINNER

Teachout was the winning hurler although the Millers scored twice off his delivery in the first of the ninth.

Other home runs were clubbed by Norris and Gill for the losers and Bill Sweeney for the Birds. (Who'll hurt tonight is unknown. Blades may try Jumbo Elliott and he may try to use Clarence Helse, who used to be effective against the Millers. Donie Bush has Ray Starr who hasn't worked a single inning. Then he may use Buck Marrow or again

IF YOUR BREATH HAS A SMELL YOU CAN'T FEEL WELL

When we eat too much, our food decays in our bowels. Our friends smell this decay coming out of our mouths and call it bad breath. We feel the poison of this decay all over our body. It makes us gloomy, grouchy and no good for anything. What makes the food decay in the bowels? Well, when we eat too much, our bile juice can't digest it. That is the bile juice! It is the most vital digestive juice in our body. Unless 2 pints of it are flowing from our liver into our bowels every day, our movements get hard and constipated and 2 pints of our food decays in our 28 feet of bowels. This decay sends poison all over our body every six minutes.

THE TRUTH ABOUT HAIR AND HAIR TREATMENTS

You may be one of millions who has wasted time, hope, money on "tonics" and treatments. Now Charles Nessler, inventor of the permanent wave, leading hair scientist, author of "Story of Hair", makes a simple but revolutionary discovery that ends BALDNESS • DANDRUFF • OILINESS • THINNING HAIR. In the past, tonics and treatments tried to stop hair from falling. That is as useless as to try to stop an animal from shedding! What you must do is make your scalp replace the hair that falls—in short, complete the hair growing cycle. It is on that scientific principle that Charles Nessler's Pro-Ker is based. 30,000 tests have proved that Pro-Ker produces results. Hair for hair, it makes the scalp replace falling hair with new hair. Enjoy your birthright—beautiful, lustrous hair. Send for Charles Nessler's revealing booklet. Better still, buy Pro-Ker at your druggist, or mail the coupon below.

BOBCATS FACE INDIANA '11'

Ohio U. Working Hard For Tilt With Big Ten Opponent Saturday.

ATHENS, Sept. 26.—The Ohio University Bobcat, his hide scratched and torn from previous prowlings in Big Ten Land, will return to that unfriendly jungle this Saturday to stalk the Indiana Hoosiers in their home camp at Bloomington.

In the season's opener at Ohio Stadium last week the Bobcats displayed little that was impressive enough to raise them above the status of underdogs for this Saturday's tilt with the Hoosiers. They fumbled consistently, their blocking was rank, and a pass defense, they had none. This was against a Rio Grande foe that was woefully weak in every department.

MUST GET "HEP"

No doubt the Green and White has abundant power, and no opening performance can be taken as a criterion of the team's ability. By the time the snowbanks cover Ohio stadium the 1934 Federal-Trautwein football product will have sent chills through many an opponent, but whether they can get on to themselves before this week-end is the worry of this Hocking valley football camp.

Standing out in the minds of the fans who trekked to the Rio Grande game last Saturday was the brilliance of Army Armbrust and Wendell Diehl, two backs that were thought to be destined for long afternoons on the bench this fall. Armbrust sent pulses strumming all the time he was in there. On four occasions "Army" broke loose for long touchdown gallops, and when he left the game in the middle of the last period he had given the Bobcats 33 points with his toe and heels.

McMILLIN'S DEBUT

Saturday will be "Bo" McMillin's debut in Indiana football and the former Centre flash will be very anxious for victory. He should have a better club than the Crimson crew in the last week. Whether his unorthodox tactics will take against Ohio cannot be forecast.

CARDS SLASH GIANTS' LEAD TO LONE TILT

Dean Wins Twenty-eighth As Philadelphia Blanks New Yorkers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Apparently the stage where they can help themselves to win the National league pennant, the New York Giants today fell back on hope, the last card in their deck. The champions and their rooters sincerely hope that the second place St. Louis Cardinals fall apart at the seams in the next few days so that the flag may go to New York and thus bring another world series to the metropolis.

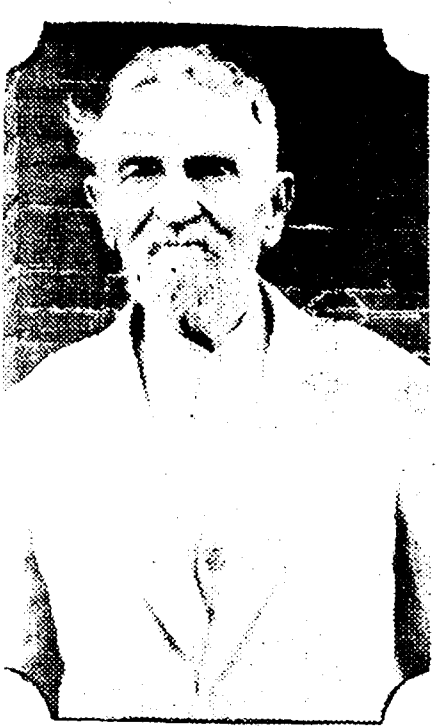

The substantial lead that existed but a few weeks ago has been slowly and surely whittled by the consistent playing of the Cardinals until today the Giants are but one full game in front. They have three games left to play while St. Louis has five and winning all of them will not assure the champions of the pennant if the Cards take all theirs. In that case a tie would exist.

Proof that the struts of the race is affecting the Giant's play can be found everyday. Young Curt Davis, ace of the Phillies pitching staff, registered his 19th victory of the season balking the Giants yesterday, 4 to 6 with four hits. Meanwhile, the Cardinals won their ninth in their last ten games, pulling out a 3 to 2 decision over the Pittsburgh Pirates. Jerome "Dizzy" Dean pitched for the Cards to score his 28th victory of the year.

Charles H. Calloway

Because his 63-year-old wife Margaret quarreled with him over his pension check, Charles H. Calloway, 89-year-old Civil war veteran, won a divorce in the circuit court at Muncie, Ind. The judge, however, forbade the aged divorcee to marry for the next two years, because of a statute governing uncontested cases.

in Kerton and were enroute back to that city from Lima where they had shopped and attended a theater.

A sixth woman, Mrs. Kent Johnson, widow of a Kerton attorney, escaped death only because she changed her mind at the last minute and decided not to accompany the five to Lima.

A few minutes before the party of five left Lima to return home, they met and talked with Mrs. Hogg's brother, Frank Schindler, a Kerton undertaker. Their bodies were taken to his establishment at Kerton after the fatal accident.

LOST CONTROL

According to witnesses of the crash which occurred two miles south of here on the Hardin highway the driver of the light sedan attempted to pass a trailer-truck but apparently lost control of the machine and it sideswiped the larger vehicle and plunged off the road. It immediately caught fire while the women screamed for help. None of them, according to C. W. Bradford, of Lima, a witness, lived for more than three minutes, however.

Bradford, J. B. McWilliams, a farmer living nearby, and Harold Wittke, of Milwaukee, driver of the truck, attempted to rescue the women but were driven back by the flames. The bodies of the women could not be removed until the Ada fire department had extinguished the blaze.

Dr. Floyd M. Elliott, Hardin coroner, indicated that he would return a verdict of accidental death after he conducted a cursory investigation. Wittke remained here to assist authorities in the probe. He had been enroute to Columbus with a cargo of peas.

LARGEST STEAMER IS NAMED QUEEN MARY

CLYDEBANK, Scotland, Sept. 26.—Great Britain's mammoth new ocean liner, the largest ever built, was launched today from John Brown's shipyard here today and christened "Queen Mary" by the gracious sovereign of the empire herself.

One moment before the 1,018 foot long grey steel hull slid down the ways into the waters of the river Clyde, the stately consort of King George broke a bottle of dominion wine upon her mammoth bow and said:

"I am happy to name this ship Queen Mary."

uel Foley of the Bronx declared that the discovery of important new evidence made it practically certain that Hauptmann was involved in the kidnapping and murder of the famous flyer's infant son. This new evidence consisted of:

(A)—The address and 1932 telephone number of Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, ransom go-between, penciled on a board at the back of a closet in the Hauptmann home.

(B)—Penciled notations, said to be serial numbers of two ransom bills, also found in the rear of the closet.

NAILS SIMILAR

(C)—The discovery of nails in the Hauptmann home which match those used in constructing the ladder used in the kidnapping.

(D)—Finding in Hauptmann's home of writing paper identical with that on which the ransom notes were written.

(3)—Announcement by department of justice agents that a striking similarity had been shown between Hauptmann's fingerprints and those which the kidnaper made in the mud near the Lindbergh home at Hopewell, N. J.

(4)—Hauptmann's calm assertion that he marked the address and phone number of Dr. Condon on the paneling simply because he was interested in the mystery like "everyone else."

(5)—The declaration by Hauptmann's attorney James M. Fawcett that he will fight vigorously any authorities to extradite Hauptmann for kidnapping and murder.

(6)—The expected completion of the grand jury's probe of the evidence against Hauptmann and the expected return of an extortion indictment.

SALEK'S PALS

Fatal shot, Pluzdrak was equally guilty, Newcomb claimed.

Defense attorneys, in presenting opening arguments, asked the jury to withhold judgment until they had opportunity to present the cases of the two youths, whose careers of crime ended when they were captured by Circleville, Ohio police after they wrecked their allegedly stolen automobile.

The trial went forward with only the regular 12 jurors in the jury box after Defense Attorney Thomas L. Newton objected to selection of an alternate juror. His objection was sustained by Presiding Judge James E. Norton.

Ashville Acts on P. W. A. Job

ASHVILLE ACTS

A lot of construction sewer legislation was rushed through the Asheville council Monday night at which meeting all six councilmen, mayor, clerk and Solicitor E. L. Crist were present. Under suspension of the rules the bond contract and sewer ordinance was passed and only a minor detail is necessary to complete the sewer transcript. With the water works project marking time and the sewer improvement practically finished it is now only a matter of time when the dirt should begin to fly in Pickaway-co's only P. W. A. project.

STREET REPAIRED

Stationers leading from Long-st to the N. & W. depot was given some needed repairs this week. The surface of the street was scarified and then rolled down, the work being done by Walnut-twtp road machinery under the supervision of Street Commissioner Weber. These repairs are only temporary as this street will likely be torn up when water works sewer construction is started. Then, therefore, with several others, will be rebuilt next year as a part of the street building program.

Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Griffith were entertained Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. Lynch at their home in Walnut-twtp.

MRS. MESSICK HURT

Mrs. Laura A. Messick, widow of the late J. W. Messick, met with a serious accident last Saturday afternoon when she fell down three stair steps at her home on Long-st. She sustained a badly bruised limb and will be confined to her bed for a time. Mrs. Messick fell and broke her limb 18 years ago and has been a cripple ever since. She has used a wheel chair for years and does a large share of her household work under this handicap.

2 More Good Will Tours Are Planned This Week

Two more Pumpkin Show good will tours are scheduled for Thursday and Friday evenings, and E. C. Colville, in charge, today issued an appeal to local motorists to take part in them.

Accompanied by the Circleville high school band, the ballyhoosers will go to Laurelville Thursday evening, which has been designated as "Circleville night" of the fair being held there. A large crowd is being urged to attend.

The band will leave here Friday evening at 5:30 o'clock for Canal Winchester to appear on the program of the fall festival being presented there this week.

On several of the good will trips there has been a shortage of machines and band members have been forced to crowd into autos and overload them.

It is hoped that a number of Circleville motorists will offer their cars to transport band members Thursday and Friday evenings.

Green candles lighted the beautifully appointed table, centered with a bowl of golden gleam nasturtiums, for the buffet supper at 7:30 o'clock.

Bridge was enjoyed at three tables following the pleasant supper hour. With the awarding of high score trophy to Mrs. Ione Reichelderfer, Mrs. Poor was presented a lovely gift.

Guests were Mrs. Poor, Mrs. John S. Neff Jr., Mrs. E. A. Warner, Mrs. Lloyd Erich of Columbus, Mrs. S. B. Metzgar of W. Union-st., Mrs. Ione Reichelderfer, Mrs. Harold Eveland, Miss Elizabeth Tolbert, Miss Evelyn Adkins, Miss Reba Lee and Mrs. Seyfert Betts.

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS
THEY tell me that country newspapers often get poetry sent to them to print. Some of the people that send in poetry don't always write it themselves. They just copy a piece they like real well, and send that in. Of course they sign their own name to it, because they don't know how much trouble that might get them into, and besides, they think it's worth the risk, just to get into print under such good poetry.

Well, the country editors are on the lookout for that kind of stuff and some of them are pretty well up on the big writers anyhow. One day a guy came in and introduced himself to the editor and handed him a poem with his name signed to it.

"This is mighty good verse," the editor says.

"Thanks. I kinda thought you'd like it."

"Did you write it?"

"Every word of it, all by myself."

"Shake hands again," says the editor. "I never knowed I'd have the good luck to shake hands with old Willie Wadsworth Longfellow himself, right here in my office in nineteen-twenty-eight!"

ing nobly in the soliciting drive which is being conducted by the Rotary club. "Already," he said, "with reports far from complete, we have collected nearly $500."

Proctor Baughman, director of the trade division, indicated that with the addition of the school parade this year, the Pumpkin Show throngs will see the greatest street presentations that have ever been shown. All of his chairmen, he said, are working diligently to boost the number of entries in their divisions.

That outside interest in the show is not at a low ebb was indicated by Harry J. Briggs, director of the horse show, who said that on a recent visit to Texas he was queried about Circleville's Pumpkin Show. Reed Shafer, president of the Chamber of Commerce, who presided at the meeting, told of a trip to Muncie, Ind., over the week-end during which a car whizzed around his machine in the middle-western state and the occupant seeing his Pumpkin Show sign, shouted, "I'll be there."

Preparations are going forward, it was indicated, to make the opening night, Wednesday, Oct. 3, a grand one. The visit and address of Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace to this city is expected to draw 20,000 persons from central Ohio here.

Everything points to the biggest and best show ever—and it opens just a week from today, folks!

more secured by someone else during the first big vote offer would easily offset the prize ballots. The difference in the votes at present among several of the leaders is just what a very few subscriptions will count this week.

To slacken their pace this week would almost surely be "fatal" to any of these leaders.

In a close race such as this one it is not unusual for just a few subscriptions to separate a winner of a small prize from the winner of a large one. Members who expect to win one of the larger prizes should overlook no prospect this week. Those who have withheld their support so far will no doubt rally to the support of their favorites this week and aid them over the winning line. Work hard these last hours—it may be that last subscription that wins. TOO MANY VOTES WILL WIN—TOO FEW WILL LOSE.

CLOSING RULES

1. The Salesmanship Club will close promptly at nine o'clock Saturday evening, September 29.

2. A ballot box will be placed in The Herald office Saturday, so that all members may have the privilege of secret balloting.

3. The doors of The Herald office will be closed and locked promptly at nine o'clock Saturday night, and no one will be permitted to enter and turn in subscriptions after that hour. However, members who are inside The Herald at that time will be given sufficient time to prepare their subscriptions and deposit them in the ballot box.

4. Members should carefully check their itemized receipts, and should any error appear, report to the campaign manager not later than Saturday noon.

Ban Police Torture

PEIPING—Trial by torture is banned in Kwangtung Province by the authorities. It has long been the practice for Chinese police to secure confessions of suspects by beating with bamboo or forcing the arrested persons to kneel for long periods on chains with pieces of wood locked behind the knees. Simultaneously, the authorities issued instructions that all death penalties must be held up until a thorough reconsideration has been given each case.

Fireproof Ships

SOME good seems likely to grow out of the Morro Castle disaster.

Had the vessel in which scores perished off the New Jersey coast been of fireproof construction, the tragic happening that shocked the nation and the world would not have occurred.

Already there is being heard a demand that the use of wood be abandoned in the construction of passenger vessels and that steel be employed in order to eliminate the fire hazard. President Roosevelt is reported as saying that he will recommend to the next session of congress legislation to provide for this.

It ought not to be necessary to pass a law to bring about this result. Ship companies ought to feel it incumbent upon them voluntarily to operate only fireproof vessels.

Fire has become probably the greatest hazard now faced in ocean travel. Improvements in the construction of ships and development of the radio have eliminated most of the old terrors of the sea. But that of fire remains.

Why shipbuilders have not overcome this hazard by building fireproof vessels is not entirely clear. The chief reason probably was the increased cost. But this becomes relatively an insignificant item in comparison with the menace to life that exists in the wooden vessel with hundreds of persons aboard.

Such disastrous fires as that on the Morro Castle do not occur often. Every first class vessel today carries efficient fire-fighting equipment, but this is no guarantee against disaster although it may reduce the chances of such. The one sure way to eliminate the fire hazard is to build only fire-proof vessels. If the Morro Castle disaster serves to bring about this reform, those who perished aboard it will not have died in vain.

Munitions-making and war-making seem to bear a close relationship.

Militarism Gone Mad

THE drastic course in military training prescribed for Italians by the council of ministers must prove discouraging to the advocates of world peace. It can leave no doubt in the minds of observers of European affairs that Europe, and consequently the world, is little further removed from the danger of war today than in the years preceding the outbreak of the World War.

Italy's action in compelling all males from 8 to 33 years of age to undergo military training stand as a challenge to other nations in that part of the world. Countries contiguous to Italy or having interests that may come into conflict with those of the latter will feel it a necessity to take steps to match the new policy to make Italy a nation of highly trained soldiers.

Never before has any nation gone as far in preparing for war. It would be difficult to imagine a more thoroughly militaristic policy or one liable to have such far-reaching and disastrous effects.

The move is another blow and a severe one to the cause of disarmament. It is an invitation to war that almost is sure to have a response some day.

Responsibility for the consequences must rest upon Mussolini. The Italian dictator may think that he is acting for the best interests of Italy, but the dangers, not only to his country but to others also, are so many and so self-evident that Italians as well as the peoples of other nations well may regard the move with grave concern.

Married persons live longer than single ones, says a statistician. But he didn't say if they were happier.

It's Getting Harder and Harder to Tell Which Way He'll Jump

DEATH SONG!

by JOAN CLAYTON AND MALCOLM LOGAN

SYNOPSIS

In August, Seifert Vail was murdered at exclusive Sherwood Forest Sanatorium. Up to that time, Mark Hillier, the playwright, crippled from arthritis, had been bored. The crime gave him new interest in life. It was he who finally solved the mystery. He saw the significance of the phonograph record singing in Vail's own voice in the room where its creator lay dead.

CHAPTER II

For two days Mark was feverishly busy. The doctors took his case history, X-rayed him, bled his legs and took specimens of his blood. When they were not examining him, he lay in bed, propped up with pillows, and issued orders by the dozen. He fought several skirmishes with the sanatorium staff, and, victorious, saw his bare, antiseptic quarters blossom into an imitation of a green room. When he had finished, a crimson carpet covered the floor; a brass spittoon gleamed in one corner; a cocktail shaker adorned the bedside table. Mark's big leather chair stood beside the bed. He wore a dress which he had written his first starring play, "The King of High Jinx." The walls were crowded with autographed pictures of the stars of two decades. The place of honor on the bureau was occupied by a portrait of a man, a young man who wore a matty derby, a dress clothes, a malacca, walking stick and a famous grin. That was Mark at twenty-two, taken in the season when High Jinx captured New York.

"It's just like home," I told Mark. "Home?" said Mark. "Get out of here before I start bawling!" We worked on Mark's new play for three months, and Mark put on a magnificent display of temper. He had always acted his plays as he wrote them, and he found it intolerable to dictate, lying quietly in bed. He was restricted to two hours of work a day, and when he was not working, he was so profoundly, bitterly bored that I feared he would never recover. I expressed that fear to Dr. John Calvert, who had taken a particular interest in Mark. "Boredom isn't fatal," he said, in his dry way. "If it were, half my patients would be dead. Tell him the mountains are worth looking at."

"You can take your mountains, and you know what you can do with them," Mark said when I repeated this advice. "My mountains are skyscrapers and my trees are street lights. Times Square is the only scenery I want to see." Dr. Calvert had sounded unsympathetic, but for some time after that conversation, he took what time he could spare from his patients in the cottages to visit Mark. That was characteristic of him. He would go to any trouble for a patient, though his manner with them was often unfortunately curt. John Calvert was not more than twenty-eight, but he was usually as sedate as a man twice that age. He seemed to me very guarded, as though he were afraid to let himself go. It was curious to see how well he got along with Mark, who shamelessly revealed every slightest emotion. Sometimes Mark carried him away, and for a little while the doctor would be gay; then he would realize that he was letting down his defenses, and he would withdraw into himself again.

In April Mark finished his play. It opened in New York on the fifteenth of May, at the end of a disastrous theatrical season. "Gas Light Willie," produced on a shoestring—Mark's own shoestring, the way—was an instant success. Mark didn't know whether to be exultant or furious. He hated Ellis Cochran's success in the role he had planned for himself. He loved his own pictures in the newspapers. They were new photographs. Mark had posed in bed for them. He wore a dress shirt, a dinner jacket and a cigarette holder that drooped from his lips at a rakish angle. The camera showed one half of a gentleman who might have been stepping from sidewalk to limousine. Mark was abnormally sensitive about his infirmity.

Even in the beginning, the murder of Seifert Vail fell into a pattern that now seems almost inevitable. If Mark had not written "Gas Light Willie," he could never have solved the crime. It would not even have occurred to him to try. "Gas Light Willie" made Mark a sanatorium celebrity. Other patients, driven by boredom in search of novelty, maneuvered for introductions to the patient whom Broadway had forgotten. Mark was a new experience to them, though they were not to him. The jaded men and women who came casually to Mark's room in the hospital were rich, ill, and self-centered. They were gossip. This was their common meeting ground with Mark.

He listened while they talked of the other patients—their annoying habits, their love affairs, their illnesses and their idiosyncrasies. So it was that his callers put into his hands the clues which were to lead him to the solution of a murder not then committed. These informal tea parties, at which he frequently served cocktails made from prescription liquor, gave Mark an understanding of the restlessness, the feverishness, the petty emotions magnified to monstrous hates and fears and incredible loves, which fill the lives of those who live in the excitement of nursing a man who is not remarkable at all. It was to insist upon the importance of the trivial.

Sue Faraday, Mark's nurse, acted as his hostess. She was a small, lovely girl with warm brown hair and eyes, and in her starched white uniform she loved like, their illnesses and their idiosyncrasies. So it was that his callers put into his hands the clues which were to lead him to the solution of a murder not then committed. These informal tea parties, at which he frequently served cocktails made from prescription liquor, gave Mark an understanding of the restlessness, the feverishness, the petty emotions magnified to monstrous hates and fears and incredible loves, which fill the lives of those who live in the excitement of nursing a man who is not remarkable at all. It was to insist upon the importance of the trivial.

"Mr. Ruxton wants to meet you, Mr. Hillier," she would say; and then, in a breathless whisper, "He's our richest patient, you know." James Ruxton, a tall, gray man dying of cirrhosis of the liver, called several times. Usually he came with his handsome, pleasant young nephew, Loren Ruxton. The tired, ill man who had built up a great investment banking house obviously had nothing in common with a man who had spent his whole life in the theatre; but he loved his nephew with all the passion of an aging, lonely man, and no interest of Loren's was too slight to engage his attention.

Twice Mark was visited by Willis Clendening and Milton Cross, who lived with Seifert Vail and James Ruxton in Lakeside Cottage. They were a strange pair. Clendening, an owl-eyed, long-nosed, inquisitive young man, boasted of his health and prowess, hungered for excitement as for a drug and suffered from acute dilatation of the heart which might kill him at any moment. Cross, a splendidly healthy hypochondriac, lived in constant fear of exertion and disturbance. Mark called him the man who died daily. Cross and Clendening quarreled continually, but they seemed to find their interminable and vicious bickering a necessity of life.

Seifert Vail came to Mark's room only once. A tall, beautifully proportioned man with a singer's deep chest, he came to tell Mark in a voice rasping and husky from an aneurism of the throat that "Gas Light Willie," which he had neither read nor seen, was trash. Mark blandly agreed. Vail amplified his criticism.

"No drama without music can be anything but shallow," he said. "I understand," said Mark, "that you were a singer."

"I had the most magnificent voice in the world," he said. "The best critics said I would be greater than Caruso." Mark said, "I heard you in Tristan, Mr. Vail."

"Tristan!" the singer exclaimed. His mouth began to work. "How Franco loved me as Tristan! Suddenly he began to cry, and as he cried he cursed in a harsh, fierce mumble. For a moment I stared at him. I had heard the story of the death of his wife and abrupt end of Vail's career a few months later. Before I could move, Vail turned abruptly and without another word left.

"I detest crying drunks," Mark said when he had gone. "I wonder where he got it," I said.

"I wonder how he paid for it," said Mark. "In fact, I wonder how he rates Sherwood Forest at all. I've never heard of charity cases here, and opera singers who've been 'exed' out for years are notoriously not millionaires."

I said a shade ironically, "Why not ask Dr. Calvert? Isn't Vail an old acquaintance of his?" "I've already asked," replied Mark, the incorrigible gleamer of facts which did not concern him. "He's as much in the dark as I am."

This incident occurred two months before the murder. I have repeated the brief conversation accurately as I can remember it because, later, Mark's only meeting with Seifert Vail was to prove so important. He never returned to Mark's room, and I hardly saw him again until the fifth of August. James Ruxton, at the suggestion of his nephew, gave a dance for all the patients well enough to attend, and at this dance Seifert Vail made his last public appearance.

Gastritis Is A Common Ailment

Soon Becomes Chronic If Faulty Eating Habits Continue

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

AT SOME time or other it is probable everyone has suffered from gastritis. As its name implies, this is an inflammation of the walls of the stomach. It leads to marked pain and discomfort.

By the time it is recognized the gastritis has usually become chronic. Often it can be traced to faulty eating habits, with persistent irritation of the lining of the stomach. The acute form may be caused by swallowing coarse and uncooked foods, or the excessive use of intoxicating beverages. It may also be produced by the absorption of some toxin or poison. This occurs in such diseases as influenza, pneumonia, measles and scarlet fever.

Faulty habits of eating carried over a period of many years, are the most common cause of gastritis. Persons who indulge in the excessive use of condiments, fried and greasy foods, or who eat irregularly, and do not chew their food properly, are frequently subject to this annoying condition.

Gastritis may be traced to a focus of infection somewhere in the body. For instance the tonsils, teeth, throat, nasal sinuses, gall bladder or appendix may be diseased. The poisons from these infected organs are carried in the blood stream to the stomach where they set up an inflammation.

The victim of gastritis often complains of heartburn, indigestion, hyperacidity or other gastric disturbance. Nausea, vomiting and diarrhea, are frequent complications. As a result of loss of appetite and temporary distress, a general nutrition and health of the body are greatly undermined. This lowers the resistance against infectious disease.

Gastritis should not be confused with gastric ulcer or other diseases of the stomach. The diagnosis can be made only by the physician who examines you. At times it is necessary to resort to the X-ray for accurate determination of the underlying cause.

Value of Strict Diet

Victims of gastritis should pay strict attention to the diet. They should avoid all foods rich in fat, fried or greasy foods and those containing an excessive amount of salt, pepper, spices and other condiments are not permitted. Foods that are difficult to digest should be avoided. The diet should be simple yet nutritious.

Never neglect heartburn, indigestion or other digestive disturbance. These complaints are not diseases, but they are signs of some disorder within the digestive tract. They may be an indication of ulcer or some more serious disease process. If recognized and cared for in its early stages, such troubles can be entirely cured. Neglect is dangerous.

His Tip Led to Arrest of Lindbergh Suspect

Walter Lyle, inset, attendant at a gasoline service station in New York City, above, has been credited with giving the tip that led to the arrest of Bruno Richard Hauptmann as a suspect in the Lindbergh baby kidnapping and murder. Receiving a forbidden $10 gold certificate from a motorist, Lyle was careful to jot down the license number of the auto. Investigation disclosed that the certificate had been one of the Lindbergh ransom notes, and Hauptmann was traced through the license.

MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Late in the 1870's the populous sections of Australia were terrorized by a notorious, dashing Robin Hood bandit, called "Stingaree."

Among his depredations was the kidnapping of the Governor General of All Australia. Later he shocked the British Empire by attending a theater in Melbourne, wearing the Governor's full regalia. He managed to escape.

With him he took Hilda Bouverie, celebrated beauty and operatic star of the period. A few days later the woman reappeared, with a story of having been taken to "Stingaree's" mountain lair. She seemed peculiarly unaffected by her experience and refused to press prosecution.

"Stingaree" was never heard of again in Australia. But for years the various capitals of the world wondered about the tall, stern, handsome man who followed the opera star about, and for whom she seemed to have the utmost devotion.

The remarkable romance between the opera star and the bandit is told in RKO-Radio Pictures' current romantic melodrama, "Stingaree," co-starring Irene Dunne and Richard Dix, with Mary Boland in a featured role, opens tonight at the Cliftona.

Laughing Around the World

With IRVIN S. COBB

What the Defendant Craved

By IRVIN S. COBB

A DARKY was up for pleading down south for a serious crime. Having been indicted, he was arraigned before the court and the case against him was called. It then developed that he had no counsel.

"Why have you engaged no attorney to defend you?" inquired the judge on the bench.

"Jedge," said the defendant, "I ain't got no money to be wastin' on lawyers. De tell me lawyers is kind of costive."

"Well," inquired His Honor, "what do you propose to do then about the trial of your case? The prosecuting attorney tells me he's ready to go ahead and impanel a jury and present the evidence."

"Jedge," answered the negro, "so far ez I is concerned, you can jest let the matter drop right here."

But the court explained that this would hardly do. He glanced about the room and his eye fell upon two striplings, newly admitted to the practice and the youngest and least experienced members of the bar.

"I shall appoint Mr. Jones and Mr. Smith," he said, indicating the juveniles, "to represent you."

The prisoner eyed his attorneys doubtfully.

"Jedge," he said, "I lak to mek you a proposition, please, suh."

"State the proposition."

"I'd lak to trade you off one of dese yere lawyers fur a good witness."

Inside Secretary

F. C. Huber, agent for the United States Ordnance Company was before the Senate Munitions Investigating Committee. It had unearthed a letter regarding sales of tear gas to Chile in which Huber claimed to have the ear of President Alessandri through "an inside secretary."

"Kindly tell us," boomed Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri, "just what you meant when you referred to this 'inside secretary'."

Huber flinched. The Committee waited.

Finally young Gerald Nye spoke up with a hopeful suggestion.

"Perhaps the 'inside secretary'," he said, "means the Secretary of the Interior."

BIGGEST CATCH

TURNERS FALLS, Mass.—It didn't get away from Walter Waidelich, so he had proof that he had landed the season's biggest catch, a giant northern pike, weighing 11½ pounds and measuring 33 inches from tip to tip. He caught the fish in the Connecticut river, near Sunderland, and took his own record, for a week before he had caught a 10-pound pike.

YOUNG MAN—WHAT ARE YOU DOING WITH YOUR BANK?

HUGH JOHNSON, RESIGNING, OFFERS TO SERVE WHEN NEEDED

Roosevelt, Aide, Part as Friends

ABOARD PRESIDENTIAL SPECIAL, Sept. 26.—Hugh Johnson has resigned.

The most meteoric career of the New Deal, approaching it at all possible the color and fire of the man who now heads the government, Franklin D. Roosevelt, is ended so far as the present administration is concerned. Johnson in resigning, advised the president that when called on again, he would be glad to serve. The president in accepting the resignation advised "Hugh," as he addressed him in the letter, that he might call on him again.

IN BRILLIANT REIGN

But never again, will the nation see Johnson in the brilliant setting he has centered for the past fifteen months. Never again will he be the czarlike figure who in effect ruled the business and industry of a land of 140,000,000 people. Never again will his rugged, lined face be seen in the newsreels as the man whose word for a time was the inescapable law.

In other words, in effect, the king is dead, and for the present there is no new figure for whom it can be said as in a monarchy, "Long Live the King." The NRA will go on New leaders will come. But there will be more than one. The big recovery unit will split into three divisions. The ruling body will be a board, so to speak. No board could approach General Johnson in color, fire and executive nerve and snap.

Johnson's separation from the New Deal, in which he has been such a towering figure for the past fifteen months, cannot but be a real wrench for President Roosevelt. It was with this that the president planned the most vital drive of his administration, the drive which he built as a march

As Senator Long Smiled After Vote Triumph

Senator Huey Long, center, posed long enough to register jubilation when the cameraman encountered him in his New Orleans hotel, where the Kingfish and his followers had been celebrating the decisive defeat of the New Orleans city machine led by Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, at the primary polls. Encircled by Senator Long's right arm is James twenty four hours a day. Time and again Mr. Roosevelt has urged the recovery administration to take a rest. Seldom has the NRA chieftain complied with these requests.

O'Connor, one of his victorious candidates, while supporting the other arm of the Kingfish, is Governor O. K. Allen, right, who also seems quite pleased. The latter had ordered 2,500 Louisiana national guardsmen into New Orleans to supervise elections, assertedly given under Huey's orders.

The Johnson resignation sent back to private life a man who has a brilliant military record, and who in business has been more than a little successful. Johnson was a regular army officer formerly, and was in the Philippines during the trouble down there.

During the World War, Johnson became a member of the war industries board, which Bernard M. ("Barney") Baruch headed. In his capacity on this board he had much to do with buying the almost incredible amount of supplies that went to help American doughboys in France. There, too, he formed a friendly association with Baruch which has continued and grown since. When Mr. Roosevelt was looking for a man to head his great recovery project, the NRA, and asked his friend and financial adviser, Baruch, the latter suggested Johnson.

Now Johnson is back in private life. Whether he will again emerge in any official capacity, is in the opinion of officials high in the confidence of Mr. Roosevelt, doubtful.

BURGLAR PHONES AHEAD
NEWTON, Mass.—The latest wrinkle in crime—burglary by telephone. A stranger called the home of Edward A. Shepherd and asked him what radio programs his family preferred. Shepherd, whose family is on a vacation said that his radio was not being used. Shortly afterwards an attempted burglary took place at Shepherd's residence.

SCIOTO-TWP SCHOOL NOTES

The second grade had a fruit parade Tuesday. Toy trucks and wagons were decorated as floats. Others in the parade carried banners and fruit posters. The first prize for the best float was given to Billy Rush. His float was "I did not eat fruit." Second prize was awarded to James Walker. His float was "Eat Oranges." Donald Gochenour and Ellabelle Redman received the third prize on "Eat More Fruit."

Fruit basket false faces were made in the art class. These will be used for the Halloween party. The third grade is working on an Indian project. The boys are making bows and arrows; the girls are stringing acorns and corn for beads. We are painting feathers for a head dress. For each group of combinations learned a feather is added to the head dress. Pauline Willoughby and Catherine Garnett have enrolled in the third grade which makes a total of 34 pupils.

The second year French class had a theater party in Columbus on Monday evening, Sept. 17. They went to the Palace Theatre to see Alexander Dumas' play, "The Count of Monte Christo." They expect later to read this story as a French classic. Mildred Reigel, Margaret Rodgers, Betty Peters, Carl Gulick, Loren Updyke and Mrs. Fortune attended this party.

Peter Tomlinson, Harold Morris, and Charles Cartrey, three boys of the eighth grade literature class are working on a pioneer project to illustrate the first stories in their literature book. The eighth grade English class is making a class newspaper. They are writing themes and news for it, also taking turns at acting as reporters. The editor-in-chief is Anna Louise Bandy, the assistant editor is Charles Cartrey, and the sports editor is Harold Morris.

The commercial law class is working on a project concerning contracts. We are discussing the kinds of contracts and the requirements of a legal contract. The second year typing class is working out a series of cover designs to exhibit at the Pumpkin Show. We are also working out other problems in soaping and arrangement of material on a page.

WITHHOLD TROUT

DENVER—The Colorado fish and game commission has halted the planting of fingerling trout in the streams of the state until another season. Because of low waters, Roland G. Parvin, commissioner, explained, thousands of fish were being lost. This year's "crop" will be held over until next spring, when they will be much larger than if planted now.

ONLY 3 MORE DAYS

OF THE HERALD'S "SALESMANSHIP CLUB"

9 p.m. is the End!

Only three more days remain of The Herald's big prize campaign. During these three days some one will by consistent effort push themselves to the front and win the $500, another will win $200, and another will win $100 and so on. These three major prizes will no doubt be won by the efforts put forth and results obtained this last week of the campaign. IT'S UP TO THE WORKERS THEMSELVES NOW AS TO HOW MUCH EXTRA EFFORT THEY PUT INTO THE DRIVE THIS WEEK. A last minute hard effort on the part of three of the workers will win for them the three larger prizes. First prize is in striking distance of several. Whether you win a big prize or a small one will depend on the results you get this week.
